BENEDICT XVI'S PUBLIC FAREWELL

When Benedict flies off into retirement by helicopter today, he will leave behind a church in crisis — one beset by sex scandal, internal divisions and dwindling numbers. But the 85-year-old pope can count on a solid legacy: While his very resignation was his most significant act, Benedict — in a quieter way — also set the church back on a conservative, tradition-minded path.

HIS LEGACY

By Nicole Winfield
Associated Press

On Monday, April 4, 2005, a priest walked up to the Renaissance palazzo housing the Vatican's doctrine department and asked the doorman to call the official in charge: It was the first day of business after Pope John Paul II had died, and the cleric wanted to get back to work.

The office's No. 2, Archbishop Angelo Amato, answered the phone and was stunned. This was no ordinary priest. It was Cardinal Joseph Ratzinger, his boss, who under the Vatican's arcane rules had technically lost his job when John Paul died.

"It tells me of the great humility of the man, the great sense of duty, but also the great awareness that we are here to do a job," said Bishop Charles Scicluna, who worked with Ratzinger before he became Pope Benedict XVI, inside the Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith.

In resigning, Scicluna said, Benedict is showing the same sense of humility, duty and service as he did after the Catholic Church lost its last pope.

"He has done his job."

HIS LIFE

■ He was born Joseph Aloisius Ratzinger on April 16, 1927, in Marktl Am Inn, in Bavaria.

■ Benedict was ordained in 1951. He was appointed bishop of Munich in 1977 and elevated to cardinal three months later.

■ Before Benedict was elected pope, he headed the Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith since 1982.

■ Benedict was elected the 265th leader of the Church on April 19, 2005. At 78, he was the oldest pope elected in 275 years and the first German one in nearly 1,000 years.

■ One of Benedict's most popular acts was beatifying his predecessor John Paul II in record time.

RETIREMENT

■ Benedict will be known as emeritus pope. Congregants still will address him as Your Holiness. He will also wear the white cassock associated with the papacy.

■ Benedict will live inside Vatican City in a monastery that has been converted for him.

Industrial hemp bill runs into roadblock

By Bruce Schreiner
Associated Press

FRANKFORT – Momentum for a bill laying the groundwork for a possible industrial hemp comeback skidded to a halt Wednesday when a Kentucky House panel failed to vote on the measure, which would set up state oversight of the one-time agricultural staple if the federal government pardons the illegal crop.

The House Agriculture and Small Business Committee heard nearly two hours of testimony but took no action on the measure, which would allow the state agriculture department to license hemp growers if production becomes legal. A lawmaker's motion seeking a vote was ruled out of order by committee Chairman Tom McKee.

Legislature set to drop legal anvil on coyotes

By Roger Alford
Associated Press

FRANKFORT – Coyotes could be shot night or day under a bill that appears headed for passage in the Kentucky Legislature.

The dog-like animals have proliferated across the state to the point that lawmakers are being pushed by constituents to take action. The proposed fix has become one of the most popular bills of the year, having breezed through the House and appearing to be on a fast track in the Senate.

Over the past two decades, coyotes have spread into all of Kentucky's 120 counties, and have sparked a growing number of complaints to wildlife officials about livestock being killed.

"They're getting pretty bold," said Sen. Robin Webb, D-Grayson. "They're killing calves and small dogs and they'd East Heights Elementary and the Thelma B. Johnson Early Learning Center were placed on "modified lockdown" Wednesday as officers were stationed outside the school in response to an anonymous tip.

Kentucky State Police received a tip Tuesday regarding a domestic disturbance dealing with a family whose children attend the Thelma B. Johnson Early Learning Center and East Heights Elementary.

Since it was a city occurrence, state police contacted the Henderson Police Department and the agency began investigating, said HPD's Sgt. Allen Schrecker. Police immediately notified officials with Henderson County Schools.

In a statement released Wednesday morning, the school district said that in the best interest and safety for its students and staff, East Heights and the Early Learning Center would be placed on modified lockdown Wednesday as

The mother of a missing Webster County woman is suing local, state and federal authorities, among others, in connection with her daughter's case.

Madisonville resident Sarah Teague filed the handwritten lawsuit Tuesday in U.S. District Court in Owensboro on the grounds of "malfeasance" against members of the Henderson Police Department, the Kentucky State

Sarah Teague is suing local, state and federal authorities.

Police, the Federal Bureau of Investigation and some individuals in connection with the August 1995 abduction of her daughter, Heather Teague, 23.

The dictionary definition of malfeasance is misconduct or unlawful acts. Sarah Teague is representing herself in this lawsuit.

"It was 17 1/2 years (Tuesday) that Heather disappeared," Teague said. "I wish it hadn't come to this (lawsuit). I would like to have the truth."

Representatives of the Kentucky State Police and the Henderson Police Department said the individual agencies have yet to receive formal notice of the lawsuit. Both agencies said if and when they receive formal notification, they still wouldn't be able to comment on pending litigation.

A spokesperson with the FBI office in Louisville also declined to comment.

Officials with the U.S. District Court on Wednesday said that Sarah Teague's case would be "submitted for review."

In the lawsuit, Teague alleges "The KSP, the Henderson Police Department ... the FBI, have answers. It is time for justice, for truth. It is time for Heather to come home."

Voting rights law puts justices at odds

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court's conservative justices voiced deep skepticism Wednesday about a section of a landmark civil rights law that has helped millions of Americans exercise their right to vote.

In an ominous note for supporters of the key provision of the Voting Rights Act, Justice Anthony Kennedy both acknowledged the measure's vital role in fighting discrimination and suggested that other important laws in U.S. history had run their course. "Times change," Kennedy said during the fast-paced, 70-minute argument.

Kennedy's views are likely to prevail on the closely divided court, and he tends to side with his more conservative colleagues on matters of race.

The court's liberals and conservatives engaged in a sometimes tense back-and-forth over whether there is an ongoing need in 2013 for the part of the voting rights law that requires states with a history of discrimination, mainly in the Deep South, to get approval before making changes in the way elections are held.

Justice Antonin Scalia called the law a "perpetuation of racial entitlement."

Chief Justice John Roberts, a vocal skeptic of the use of race in all areas of public life, cited a variety of statistics that showed starker racial disparities in some aspects of voting in Massachusetts than in Mississippi. Then he asked the government's top Supreme Court lawyer whether the Obama administration thinks "the citizens in the South are more racist than citizens in the North?"

The answer from Solicitor General Donald Verrilli was no.

The question, and others like it from the conservative justices, largely echoed the doubts they first expressed four years ago in a similar case that ended without resolving the constitutionality of the latest renewal of the voting rights law, in 2006. They questioned whether there remain appreciable differences between the locations covered by the law and those that are not.

They also wondered whether there was any end in sight for a provision that intrudes on states' rights to conduct elections and which was regarded as an emergency response to decades of state-sponsored discrimination in voting, despite the Fifteenth Amendment's guarantee of the vote for black Americans.

Shipping bounces back as Mississippi River rises

■ Officials caution drought consequences remain a problem

By Jim Suhrap
Business writer

ST. LOUIS – Mississippi River shippers have returned to hauling full loads after several storms and aggressive rock-clearing helped deepen the waterway, eliminating worries about barge traffic shutting down, the river's stewards and barge operators said Wednesday.

Barge operators had lessened their loads as the river's level fell, allowing the barges to sit higher in the water. But there have been concerns for months that if the water level fell much more, all barge traffic could be halted.

The recent reversal of that has the Army Corps of Engineers and the Coast Guard declaring victory, though they cautioned the threat to shipping on the vital corridor could return next winter as the nation's worst drought in decades has shown no signs of easing.

"I'd say we've gotten through the toughest period we're going to see in the low-water period," said Mike Petersen, a spokesman for the Army Corps of Engineers, which scrambled in recent months to clear rock pinnacles from a crucial stretch of the Mississippi south of St. Louis.

With recent storms that socked the nation's midsection with snow and rain, "Mother Nature met us halfway, and that's what we needed," Petersen added. "But it also took tremendous elbow grease to keep that open. We're all a little bit weary, but we're relieved to see the river come up and not have any groundings."

The Mississippi had been growing ever shallower with the drought and a seasonal cutback on the amount of water fed into it from the Missouri River at St. Louis. Barge operators compensated by lightening their loads, which increased shipping costs because more barges were required to move the same amount of cargo..

As the industry worried a shutdown could be imminent, the Army Corps scrambled to keep the river at a minimum of 9 feet deep for safe barge navigation. For months, the river hovered just a few feet — and at times a few inches — above that level.

Blasting and removal of rock pinnacles added 2 feet of depth at a troublesome southern Illinois stretch, and recent storms fed the river and its tributaries.

On Wednesday, the river gauge at St. Louis showed a channel depth of about 18 feet. The National Weather Service said it expects the river to rise another 2 feet through the weekend before a gradual decline. But that forecast assumes no additional precipitation, and the approaching spring months typically are among the wettest of the year.

Budget cuts may ground military jets at air show

The Associated Press

LOUISVILLE – Federal spending cuts that are set to take effect Friday may mean no military jets will participate in the air show during this year's Thunder Over Louisville.

Wayne Hettinger, who prod uces the air show, told The Courier-Journal that more civilian acts have been signed up to fill out the event on April 20.

During previous shows, Hettinger said Navy jet fighters such as the FA-18F "Super Hornet" and Air Force jets such as the A-10 "Warthog Tank Killer" have thrilled crowds.

Due to the impending budget cuts, U.S. military jet teams have been grounded.

"We saw this coming last July and started doubling and tripling up on civilian aircraft," Hettinger said.

He said if Congress resolves the budget impasse, military planes could be accommodated as long as he has notice of at least 24 hours.

Hettinger said as of this week there are seven civilian air show acts confirmed for the event with about 35 planes. He said some acts could perform more than once.

"If we lose the military, we will still have a full air show, from 3 p.m. to 9:30 p.m.," shortly before the fireworks begin, he said.

Even if the show loses the participating of active military, he said it is possible that Kentucky Air Guard planes would be available. However, he said it is impossible to predict whether military jets or National Guard planes would be available for the annual event.

"On a worst-case basis, we will start at 3 p.m. and do a civilian air show. And any military aircraft passing through, we will try to get them" at least to do a flyover, Hettinger said.

Promoters said Thunder Over Louisville attracts about 700,000 people along the Ohio River shoreline in Kentucky and Indiana making it among the largest annual events in the Southeast.

Kentucky State Police are investigating a shooting involving an off-duty Warren County Sheriff's deputy. According to officials, officer Tommy Brown shot Brandon Bradshaw of Bowling Green, Tuesday, in the parking lot of Michelle's Consignment Boutique, located at 1135 U.S. 31-West By-Pass.

Off-duty deputy involved in shooting

The Associated Press

BOWLING GREEN – Kentucky State Police are investigating a shooting that involved an off-duty Warren County sheriff's deputy.

Media reported the shooting took place on Tuesday afternoon in the parking lot of a Bowling Green business.

Kentucky State Police Trooper Jonathan Biven identified the deputy as Thomas Brown and the person shot as 27-year-old Brandon Bradshaw of Bowling Green.

A witness said Brown was showing his badge when the shooting took place. Police said the deputy has been placed on administrative leave while the shooting is investigated.

Bradshaw is a former Warren County constable who currently is employed as a youth theater educator.

Police say Bradshaw is being treated for gunshot wounds. Brown wasn't injured.

Western Kentucky cemetery vandalized

The Associated Press

PEMBROKE, Ky. – Police are investigating after a visitor at a western Kentucky cemetery discovered 40 headstones vandalized.

Cemetery caretaker Jason Hancock told the Kentucky New Era that the vandalism occurred between Sunday afternoon and Monday morning.

Hancock said an employee of Hopkinsville Monument Company made the discovery when visiting Rosedale Cemetery in Pembroke to set up a monument and called him to report it.

"We were shocked," Hancock said. "(The damage) was from one end of the cemetery to the other."

Hancock said several headstones were pushed off their bases. He said some can likely be repaired, but he isn't sure about others — especially older stones that date back to the 1800s.

He said a family who visited the cemetery on Sunday afternoon reported no damage, so he thinks the vandalism occurred later that evening.

He reported the damage to the Christian County Sheriff's Office, which has begun an investigation.

"It's completely disrespectful," he said. "Some of the families involved are quite upset and they should be. You don't think of vandalism happening in a cemetery."

Man hit, killed by train Tuesday

The Associated Press

NICHOLASVILLE – A coroner says a man has been hit and killed by a train in central Kentucky.

Jessamine County Coroner Michael Hughes told WLEX-TV that it appears the man was standing on the tracks facing the train when he was hit late Tuesday.

The victim has not been identified, but was described as a white male between the ages of 30 and 50.

School personnel attend workshop

School personnel who serve children with autism and other developmental disabilities recently received specialized training from a visiting board certified behavior analyst.

Dr. Vincent Carbone has more than 30 years of experience designing learning environments for people with autism and developmental disabilities. He was invited to visit Henderson at the request of Lisa Crook, director of special education for Henderson County Schools, according to a news release.

Carbone held a workshop on Feb. 20-22 for special education teachers, speech pathologists, schools psychologists, and special education consultants on the behavioral approach to teaching communication skills to children with autism and other developmental disabilities.

Participants in the workshop learned how to conduct a behavioral language assessment. Attendees also learned how to select the best form of communication for a child, whether it be vocal, singing or pointing and exchanging pictures.

As a follow- up to the instruction, 26 participants who attended the February training will be invited to participate in a subsequent two-day workshop entitled, "Teaching Verbal Behavior: Hands on Training for Tutors and Therapists." Carbone will train the select group at his New York clinic on how to implement his strategies and techniques.

Police department seeking applications

The Henderson Police Department is seeking applications for police officers.

Applications will be accepted until 5 p.m., Friday, March 8.

Two information sessions have been scheduled for those interested in applying for the position. The sessions will be at 6 p.m. Monday at the police department, 1990 Barret Court, and at 6 p.m. Tuesday at the John F. Kennedy Center, 515 S. Alvasia St.

The written exam will be Saturday, March 16. Only those who have submitted an application will be eligible to take the exam.

People can pick up applications from the human resources department located at the Henderson Municipal Building. Individuals can also download an application by going to www.cityofhendersonky.org and looking under the category of Job Opportunities.

HPD Citizen's Academy Tuesday

End of Cuba's Castro years on horizon

Raul Castro was rubber-stamped Sunday into another term as Cuba's president. He says this term will be his last and that he will retire in 2018. In 54 years, Cubans have had only two presidents — not that they had much choice in the matter — Raul, 81, and his ailing older brother, Fidel, 86, the country's long-serving dictator who stepped aside for Raul only when ill health forced him to.

Bypassing an entire generation of aging Castroites, Raul named Miguel Diaz-Canel, 52, as his new first vice president and heir apparent.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Cuba's President Raul Castro

Diaz-Canel replaces Jose Ramon Machado Ventura, 81, who fought alongside the Castros in the Cuban revolution.

Raul praised Machado Ventura for his patriotism and selflessness in making way for Diaz-Canel, although voluntarily relinquishing power has not been a hallmark of the Castros' Cuba.

Raul told a gathering of legislative leaders that he plans to establish two-term limits for Cuba's top political offices and establish age limits for holding those offices.

These may be well-intentioned reforms, but they would also assure that no future leaders challenge the Castro brothers for their place in Cuba's history books.

Raul reiterated his commitment "to defend, maintain and continue to perfect socialism," but while in office he nibbled at the edges of Cuba's pervasive state socialism, allowing certain types of private businesses and real estate ownership, and easing travel restrictions. Those steps were small and slow in coming, but at least they were in the right direction if Cuba is ever to gain a modicum of prosperity.

Diaz-Canel, an electrical engineer by training, is a former minister of higher education and headed the Communist Party in two provinces.

He learned quickly when a charismatic patron of his was dumped by the Castros that the better part of valor was to be neither seen nor heard. He apparently excels in backroom politics, a skill he will need because, while Raul sees him as the heir apparent, it's a safe bet that a lot of Cuban politicians, their ambitions bottled up by the long rule of the Castros, do not.

Meanwhile, Raul could celebrate his second term and indicate his desire for friendly relations with the U.S. by releasing Alan Gross, 63, a USAID contractor who was arrested in 2009 and sentenced to 15 years in prison for illegally bringing communications equipment onto the island.

Gross' crime was apparently trying to link Cuba's small Jewish community to other Jewish communities by providing Internet connections. Most of the civilized world does not see this as a crime and neither should Cuba.

Sequestration Obama's fault; GOP will pay

JAY AMBROSE
COLUMNIST

"Spit in the ocean" — it's a phrase that's well-worn, and for a reason, namely that it su ms up so splendidly the idea of something that is itsy-bitsy relative to something very, very big.

"Sequestration" — it's a four-syllable word referring to across-the-board spending cuts of $85 billion scheduled for automatic implementation with the purpose of reducing deficits and better controlling the federal debt. However large it sounds, the amount is spit next to the oceanic gobs of owed money that could easily drown the American economy.

You'd hardly know as much listening to President Barack Obama. You almost get the idea that sequestration means the military will have to fight off terrorists with bare fists, that lonely students will sit in schools minus teachers, that hospitals will be bereft of caregivers and that no air traffic controllers will be at airports to let your planes take off crash-free for long-planned vacations.

I promise you, it's not as bad as he says, though there are problems. They are mostly Obama's fault. He and his White House gang are mostly to blame for the whole idea, and he is the one primarily in the way of doing something about the confusion, inconvenience and worse that will result in the absence of a deal with Republicans to set things right.

The fact is that House Republicans have already passed legislation substituting considered spending cuts for across-the-board, indiscriminate ones and that those refusing compromise are Obama and Senate Democrats. Ideologically fixated on ever-bigger, more controlling government, the president says there will be no bargain without still more tax hikes on top of those he won in the so-called fiscal cliff deal. And while the Republicans really should go along with nuanced tax reform of the pro-growth kind, the first thing should be the spending cuts.

Obama may have figured he could get what he wanted if he said that was the only way Republicans would get what they wanted — an end to the sequestration's thoughtless spending cuts in defense. Instead, the Republicans have apparently noticed what the Washington Examiner's Byron York has pointed out: Those cuts just slow down the rate of military spending growth.

Concerning the bigger picture, columnist George F. Will has observed that the overall sequestration cuts in the first year would still leave federal spending 12 percent more than when Obama became president. He says the cuts over 10 years would reduce spending from $46 trillion to $44.8 trillion — not all that much, especially considering that we borrow something like 40 cents for every dollar spent.

Reported federal figures show government spending has gone up by more than $800 per American since 2008, the year before Obama became president.

For all of this, Obama is still likely to win politically. The wily one has spared no propagandistic effort to portray the Republicans as the heartless, reckless bad guys, and too few commentators have caught up with some of the basics, such as the work of The Washington Post's Bob Woodward. Though hardly saying the Republicans are sweethearts, he has shown through his research how sequestration became a reality and entered common English usage as a consequence of White House conniving.

The Republicans appear ready to negotiate on how the spending cuts are done, but if they don't surrender to the tax bullying, Obama seems determined to just let the sequestration happen, blaming it on them. He will still be a hero to a public that voted him back into office, now gives him high favorability ratings and is proving in polls that it's no toughie to fool lots of people most of the time.

As for the Republicans, they will get blamed for this spit in the ocean and get spit in the face in return.

Sequester fears already taking toll on jobs

MARTIN SCHRAM
COLUMNIST

Saboteurs struck with plenty of warning throughout 2012, crippling America's already-weak jobs recovery — yet virtually unseen and unreported by our democracy's news-media watchdogs.

The sabotage apparently shattered hopes of hundreds of thousands of job-seeking Americans by freezing and sometimes canceling job creation in the government and private sectors since the start of 2012. But it wasn't the work of al-Qaida terrorists or cyber-enemy agents half a world away.

It was an inside job. The perps are well-known: President Barack Obama, his White House staff and the Republicans and Democrats in Congress. They set in motion a cause-and-effect sabotage that was entirely predictable.

It began when their oxymoronically named Budget Control Act of 2011 created the so-called "sequester" — spending cuts so drastic they'd be considered horrific and thus would never happen.

Here's what actually happened after that: The bipartisan Obama-Republican sequester announcement unintentionally but predictably triggered a Sequester Shockwave that became a coast-to-coast tsunami, freezing job hiring ever since.

Federal agencies, uncertain they'd get their already-budgeted project funding, instituted hiring freezes — just in case the sequester hit. That spread nationwide, first to the government's largest private contractors, then to smaller subcontractors, states and local governments and their contractors and subcontractors.

Since the Sequester Shockwave was so predictable, you'd think it should have been easily detectable here at the governance intersection of the news media, policy and politics.

But its existence and impact went virtually undetected — or, at least, unreported by my colleagues. Yet, economists and think-tank experts I've talked with all agreed with my account of what transpired.

No government agency or think tank or news organization to date has produced a report totaling how many jobs were frozen or positions canceled because of the sequester threat. The toll isn't easy to quantify, but it can and should be measured.

The effort had to start with journalists or analysts thinking about what was really happening — then gathering the numbers to prove it.

Because it's a big task to gather numbers of jobs for which hiring was delayed or scrapped because officials feared a pending sequester, the largest news organizations are theoretically best positioned to get the story. Think of the often-underused potential of The Associated Press or Reuters, wire services with journalists nationwide. Or The New York Times, The Washington Post or The Wall Street Journal.

In contrast, it is much easier to get good estimates for anticipated job losses from a 2013 sequester. Stephen S. Fuller, a George Mason University economist, estimated that 2.14 million jobs would be lost nationwide. Defense cuts would constitute 325,693 jobs lost (48,174 of them civilian Defense Department employees, the rest mainly defense contractors). Nondefense cuts would cost 420,529 jobs (229,116 of them federal employees, most of the rest from contractors).

In an interview, Fuller said he was sure many jobs were already lost in 2012 because budgeters didn't dare staff up for projects that were about to be scrapped. While he didn't know of anyone who'd tried to gather the totals, he has come across anecdotal examples and is convinced the sequester's impact has already been significant.

Here's one example: At the Government Accountability Office, U.S. Comptroller General Gene L. Dodaro told his staff, in a recent memo first quoted in The Washington Post: "We have been allocating our funds since the start of the fiscal year in a very conservative manner, recognizing that sequestration might go into effect." Dodaro added: "We project that we would no longer require furloughs at GAO this year to absorb the potential reduction associated with sequestration."

If the comptroller general's thinking was typical of the policies throughout the federal government — and many experts think it was — we begin to get just how much America's jobs-weakened recovery may have already been unintentionally crippled by the shamefully short-sighted Obama-Republican sequester.

It's a powerful, potentially prize-winning news story we have yet to see.

Victim's dad talks to senators

Neil Heslin, the father of 6-year-old Jesse who was slain in the Sandy Hook massacre Dec. 14 in Newtown, Conn., holds a picture while testifying Wednesday on Capitol Hill in Washington.

WASHINGTON – After weeks of arguing constitutional fine points and citing rival statistics, senators wrangling over gun control saw and heard the anguish of a bereft father.

Neil Heslin, whose 6-year-old son, Jesse, was among those cut down at a Connecticut elementary school in December, asked the Senate Judiciary Committee on Wednesday to ban assault weapons like the one that killed his child.

"I'm not here for the sympathy or the pat on the back," Heslin, a 50-year-old construction worker, told the senators, weeping openly during much of his hushed 11-minute testimony. "I'm here to speak up for my son."

At his side were photos: of his son as a baby, of them both taken on Father's Day, six months before Jesse was among 20 first-graders and six administrators killed at Sandy Hook Elementary School in Newtown, Conn. That massacre has hoisted gun control to a primary political issue this year, though the outcome remains uncertain.

The hearing's focus was legislation by Sen. Dianne Feinstein, D-Calif., to ban assault weapons and ammunition magazines carrying more than 10 rounds. A Bushmaster assault weapon was used at Newtown by the attacker, Adam Lanza, whose body was found with 30-round magazines.

Feinstein said such a firearm "tears peoples' bodies apart. I don't know why as a matter of public policy we can't say they don't belong."'

Republicans had several answers. They argued her proposal would violate the Second Amendment's right to bear arms and take firearms from law-abiding citizens, and said current laws aimed at keeping guns from criminals are not fully enforced.

U.S., Europe to expand role in Syrian conflict

By Matthew Lee and Bradley Klapper
Associated Press

ROME – The United States and some European allies are edging closer to direct involvement in Syria's civil war with plans to deliver meals, medical kits and other forms of assistance to the rebels battling President Bashar Assad.

The U.S., Britain, France and Italy aren't planning to supply the Free Syrian Army with weapons or ammunition. But moves are afoot to significantly boost the size and scope of aid to the political and military opposition.

Such decisions could be announced as early as Thursday at an international conference on Syria in Rome.

Britain and France are keen to give the rebels the means to protect themselves from attacks by Assad's forces, including Scud missiles fired in recent days against the city of Aleppo, U.S. and European officials say.

Assistance could mean combat armor, vehicles and other equipment not deemed to be offensive, the officials said. It could include training in battlefield medical care and the protection of human rights, they said.

For now, the Obama administration is advancing more modestly. It is nearing a decision whether to give ready-made meals and medical supplies to the opposition fighters, who have not received direct U.S. assistance.

U.S. Secretary of State John Kerry was expected to announce the new contributions at the Rome conference, in addition to tens of millions of dollars intended for rule of law and governance programs.

The shifts in strategy are part of a step-by-step process that could lead to direct military aid to carefully screened members of the Free Syrian Army if the nearly 2-year conflict continues. Some 70,000 people have died in the fighting.

The European Union last week renewed an arms embargo against Syria for three months. But foreign ministers made clear that the decision could be reviewed while they look at ways to increase pressure on Assad to leave.

Grandmother, two children found dead

NORTH STONINGTON – Debra Denison's struggles with mental illness were well-known in her family, and when she wanted to pick up her grandsons from day care to mark the older boy's birthday, mother Brenda Perry hesitated.

Denison not only wanted to pick up 2-year-old Alton and 6-month-old Ashton, but she also wanted to do it alone, the boys' great-grandmother said.

Denison left a suicide note, drove alone to the day care, picked up the boys, took them to a nearby lake and apparently used her husband's gun to fatally shoot them and herself, authorities and relatives said Wednesday. The bodies were found Tuesday night in a car parked near Lake of Isles in Preston.

Official retires after immigrants freed

WASHINGTON – The senior Homeland Security Department official in charge of arresting and deporting undocumented immigrants announced his retirement the same day the agency said hundreds of people facing deportation had been released from immigration jails due to looming budget cuts, according to a letter obtained Wednesday by The Associated Press. The government said he had told his bosses weeks ago that he planned to retire.

Gary Mead, executive associate director over enforcement and removal operations at Immigrations and Customs Enforcement, disclosed his departure in an email to his staff Tuesday afternoon. The announcement of the release of the undocumented immigrants had come earlier in the day.

Change in child porn sentencing urged

WASHINGTON – The U.S. Sentencing Commission said the advent of the Internet has led to broad sentencing disparities in child pornography cases, and that the existing penalty structure needs to be changed.

The report said the current sentencing scheme fails to distinguish adequately among offenders based on how dangerous they are, and is overly severe in some cases.

The commission urged Congress to amend the law to take into account the volume of an offender's child pornography collection, the types of sexual conduct depicted in the images, the ages of the victims depicted, how long an offender has maintained a collection and how involved an offender is with others in an Internet "community" devoted to child pornography.

CHARDON – One day after a teen gunman pleaded guilty in the deadly school shooting in northeast Ohio, students marked its anniversary Wednesday with hugs, supportive messages and a somber march through town.

The march by Chardon High School students ended at the courthouse where the shooter, T.J. Lane, 18, had pleaded guilty Tuesday to all charges. Lane could face life in prison at his sentencing March 19.

The observance honored Daniel Parmertor and Demetrius Hewlin, both 16, and Russell King Jr., 17, who were killed in the Feb. 27, 2012, rampage. Three others were injured.

University compiles list of slave owners

LONDON — A new database launched Wednesday lets Britons uncover uncomfortable information — whether their ancestors owned slaves.

Researchers at University College London spent three years compiling a searchable listing of thousands of people who received compensation for loss of their "possessions" when slave ownership was outlawed by Britain in 1833.

Some 46,000 people were paid a total of 20 million pounds — the equivalent of 40 percent of all annual government spending at the time — after the freeing of slaves in British colonies in the Caribbean, Mauritius and southern Africa.

Their descendants include writers Graham Greene and George Orwell. Orwell's real name was Eric Blair, and the trustees of his great-grandfather, Charles Blair, were paid 4,442 pounds for 218 slaves on a plantation in Jamaica.

Research associate Keith McClelland said the project would help show how the legacy of slavery still affects Britain.

He says 10 percent of wealthy 19th century Britons were connected to the slave trade, and proceeds helped build railways, businesses, buildings and art collections that still exist.

Elba Esther Gordillo, the head of Mexico's powerful teachers union, could face up to 30 years in prison if found guilty of embezzling about $160 million from the union she has led for nearly a quarter century.

Mexico locks up union chief of influential teachers union

By E. Eduardo Castillo and Mark Stevenson
Associated Press

MEXICO CITY – The arrest of Mexico's most powerful union leader echoes the hardball tactics of Mexico's once-imperial presidency while pushing forward an education reform that Enrique Peña Nieto has made a centerpiece of his new administration.

Elba Esther Gordillo, known for flashing her Hermes handbags and heels, stood behind bars Wednesday in a grim prison in eastern Mexico City as a judge read off charges of embezzlement and organized crime.

The arrest sidelined a woman who had tried to mobilize teachers to block a schools shake-up designed to end her control over hiring and firing of teachers across the country.

It also sent a message to other union bosses and business magnates: Don't get in the way of Peña Nieto, whose Institutional Revolutionary Party has newly returned to the power it held for seven straight decades, when incoming presidents often crushed those who challenged them.

"This is an old tactic, let's hope that it doesn't just stop there, as it did in the past, when a single case was enough to calm things down and add legitimacy" to presidential power, said Jose Antonio Crespo, an analyst at the Center for Economic Studies.

Crespo was referring to the business magnates and union bosses who have built fortunes and political power by dominating whole sectors of the economy.

Gordillo, whose 1.5 million-member National Union of Education Workers organized protests against Peña Nieto's education reform signed into law this week, was pulled off a plane arriving from San Diego late Tuesday and taken to Mexico City's women's prison.

Gordillo, 68, was charged with embezzling about $160 million from the union she has led for nearly a quarter century.

The judge in the case said he would rule in three to six days on whether the evidence is sufficient to merit a trial.

If found guilty, Gordillo could face 30 years in prison. As in past cases, officials denied any political motive. The Mexican education system has been persistently one of the worst performers among the world's developed economies, with few signs of improvement.

Nearly every Mexican 4-year-old is in preschool, but only 47 percent are expected to graduate high school. In the U.S., the number is closer to 80 percent.

Pistorius substance an herbal remedy

By Gerald Imray
Associated Press

JOHANNESBURG – The substance found in Oscar Pistorius' bedroom after the shooting death of his girlfriend was identified by his representatives Wednesday as Testis compositum — an herbal remedy they said is used for muscle recovery. A product by that name also is sold as a sexual enhancer.

Testis compositum is marketed by some online retailers in both oral and injectable forms as a testosterone booster and sexual performance aid that contains the testicles, heart and embryo of pigs, among other ingredients. Some retailers say it can treat fatigue.

At the Paralympian's bail hearing last week in the shooting death of Reeva Steenkamp, police said they found needles in Pistorius' bedroom along with the substance, which a detective initially named in court as testosterone.

Pistorius spokeswoman Lunice Johnston said in an email to The Associated Press that the product was being used "in aid of muscle recovery." She did not say whether the substance was the same as the product that is sold as a sex enhancer.

In court, Pistorius defense lawyer Barry Roux said the substance was not banned by sports authorities.

The World Anti-Doping Agency said its science department had already been made aware of the substance and that it wasn't banned.

"It would appear to be a homeopathic treatment, and these treatments are not prohibited by the list," WADA said in a statement to the AP.

police investigated.

A modified lockdown means that "people cannot enter or exit the building unless it is during a 'monitored' regular school dismissal/arrival or with the permission of a school authority or police officer on site," said Danielle Crafton, public information officer for Henderson County Schools.

No one was able to enter either school without authorization by school officials or police, she said.

A modified lockdown means that "people cannot enter or exit the building unless it is during a 'monitored' regular school dismissal/arrival or with the permission of a school authority or police officer on site.

An officer was sent to both schools and was stationed there for the remainder of the day, Schrecker said. Whether a police presence would continue at the school beyond Wednesday hadn't been determined.

"We're going to get with the school system and we'll make that decision with them," he said.

The Early Learning Center's morning session was dismissed at regular time, and the afternoon session also proceeded at the normal time. East Heights also dismissed at the regular time.

Principal Nancy Gibson placed a One Call to East Heights Elementary families at approximately 9:30 a.m. Coordinator Aleisha Sheridan placed a One Call to Thelma B. Johnson Early Learning Center families at approximately 10 a.m.

POPE

dwindling numbers.

But the 85-year-old pope can count on a solid legacy: While his very resignation was his most significant act, Benedict — in a quieter way — also set the church back on a conservative, tradition-minded path.

He was guided by the firm conviction that many of the ills afflicting the church could be traced to a misreading of the reforms of the Second Vatican Council.

He insisted that the 1962-65 meetings that brought the church into the modern era were not a radical break from the past, as portrayed by many liberals, but rather a continuation of the best traditions of the 2,000-year-old church.

Benedict was the teacher pope, a theology professor who turned his Wednesday general audiences into master classes about the Catholic faith and the history, saints and sinners that contributed to it.

In his teachings, he sought to boil Christianity down to its essential core. He didn't produce volumes of encyclicals like his predecessor, just three: on charity, hope and love. (He penned a fourth, on faith, but retired before finishing it.)

Considered by many to be the greatest living theologian, he authored more than 65 books, stretching from the classic "Introduction to Christianity" in 1968 to the final installment of his triptych on "Jesus of Nazareth" last year — considered by some to be his most important contribution to the church. In between he produced the "Catechism of the Catholic Church" — essentially a how-to guide to being a Catholic.

Benedict spent the bulk of his early career in the classroom, as a student and then professor of dogma and fundamental theology at universities in Bonn, Muenster, Tuebingen and Regensburg, Germany.

"His classrooms were crowded," recalled the Rev. Joseph Fessio, a theology student of Ratzinger's at the University of Regensburg from 1972-74, and now the English-language publisher of his books. "I don't recall him having notes," Fessio said. "He would stand at the front of the class, and he wasn't looking at you, not with eye contact, but he was looking over you, almost meditating."

It's a style that he's kept for 40 years.

CONFLICTING VIEWS

Benedict never wanted to be pope and he didn't take easily to the rigors of the job. Elected April 19, 2005, after one of the shortest conclaves in history, Benedict was, at 78, the oldest pope elected in 275 years and the first German in nearly a millennium.

Faithful are reflected in the roof of Pope Benedict XVI's pope-mobile as he arrives to celebrate his last general audience in St. Peter's Square, at the Vatican, Wednesday. Benedict XVI basked in an emotional sendoff, recalling moments of "joy and light" during his papacy but also times of great difficulty. He also thanked his flock for respecting his decision to retire.

> "To love the church is to have the courage to make difficult, painful choices, always keeping in mind the good of the church, not oneself."
> Pope Benedict XVI

At first he was stiff.

Giovanni Maria Vian, editor of the Vatican newspaper L'Osservatore Romano, recalled that in the early days Benedict used to greet crowds with an awkward victory gesture "as if he were an athlete."

"At some point someone told him that wasn't a very papal gesture," Vian said. Benedict changed course, opting for an open-armed embrace or an almost effeminate twinkling of his fingers on an outstretched hand as a way of connecting with the crowd.

"No one is born a pope," Vian said. "You have to learn to be a pope."

And slowly Benedict learned.

Crowds accustomed to a quarter-century of superstar John Paul II, grew to embrace the soft-spoken, scholarly Benedict, who had an uncanny knack for being able to absorb different points of view and pull them together in a coherent whole.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Pope Benedict XVI kisses a baby during his general audience in St. Peter's Square at the Vatican, Wednesday.

He traveled, though less extensively than John Paul, and presided over Masses that were heavy on Latin, Gregorian chant and the silk brocaded vestments of his pre-Vatican II predecessors.

Benedict seemed genuinely surprised by the warm reception he received — as well as the harsh criticism when things went wrong, as they did when he lifted the excommunication of a bishop who turned out to be a Holocaust-denier.

For a theologian who for decades had worked toward reconciliation between Catholics and Jews, the outrage was fierce and painful. Benedict was also burdened by what he called the "filth" of the church: the sins and crimes of its priests.

As prefect of the Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith, Benedict saw firsthand the scope of sex abuse as early as the 1980s, when he tried unsuccessfully to persuade the Vatican legal department to let him remove abusive priests quickly.

But it was 2001 before he finally stepped in, ordering all abuse cases sent to his office for review.

"We used to discuss the cases on Fridays; he used to call it the Friday penance," recalled Scicluna, who was Ratzinger's sex crimes prosecutor from 2002-2012.

Still, to this day, Benedict hasn't sanctioned a single bishop for covering up abuse.

"Unfortunately, Pope Benedict's legacy in the abuse crisis is one of mistaken emphases, missed opportunities, and gestures at the margin, rather than changes at the center," said Terrence McKiernan of BishopAccountability.org, an online resource of abuse documentation.

He praised Benedict for meeting with victims, and acknowledged the strides the Vatican made under his leadership. But, he said Benedict ignored the problem for too long, "prioritizing concerns about dissent over the massive evidence of abuse that was pouring into his office."

"He acted as no other pope has done when pressed or forced, but his papacy has been reactive on this central issue," McKiernan said in an email.

Benedict also gets poor grades from liberal Catholics, who felt abandoned by a pope who seemed to roll back the clock on the modernizing reforms of Vatican II and launched a crackdown on nuns, deemed to have strayed too far from his doctrinal orthodoxy.

Some priests are now living in open rebellion with church teaching, calling for a rethink on everything from homosexuality to women's ordination to priestly celibacy.

"As Roman Catholics worldwide prepare for the conclave, we are reminded that the current system remains an 'old boys club' and does not allow for women's voices to participate in the decision of the next leader of our church," said Erin Saiz Hanna, head of the Women's Ordination Conference, a group that ordains women in defiance of church teaching.

The group plans to raise pink smoke during the conclave "as a prayerful reminder of the voices of the church that go unheard."

GUARDIAN OF FAITH

But Benedict won't be around at the Vatican to see it. His work is done. "Mission Accomplished," Vian said.

And as the pope told 150,000 people in his final speech as pope: "To love the church is to have the courage to make difficult, painful choices, always keeping in mind the good of the church, not oneself."

probably take small children or you if they were big enough or that many of them."

The Senate Natural Resources and Energy Committee passed the measure 10-0 on Wednesday and sent it to the full Senate grouped with a handful of other bills that are expected to pass easily.

The measure would allow hunters to use shotguns and lights to kill coyotes at night. Already, they're fair game during daylight hours.

Doug Morgan, president of the Kentucky Houndsmen Association, said he found out for himself that coyotes have become a danger to small pets.

"I personally had one of my dogs killed in the woods by coyotes," he said. "I found it mauled and killed. They're also decimating small game. They're a danger to domestic animals. And they're attacking, harassing and killing hunting dogs."

Kentucky Wildlife Commissioner Jon Gassett supported the legislation, too. If the legislation passes, Gassett said regulations would be drafted to establish guidelines for hunting at night with lights. Those regulations would make the practice off-limits during the fall and winter in an attempt to ensure that unscrupulous hunters can't use coyote hunting as a cover for shooting deer.

"We want to discourage or reduce the potential for people to poach deer," Gassett said. "That could happen very easily if you're using a spotlight at night."

HEMP
from 1A

hemp, which thrived in Kentucky generations ago but has been banned for decades since the federal government classified it as a controlled substance related to marijuana. Hemp has a negligible content of THC, the psychoactive compound that gives marijuana users a high.

McKee, D-Cynthiana, never called for a vote on his proposed substitute, and hemp supporters said it showed he didn't have enough committee support.

Later Wednesday, McKee reconvened the committee briefly during a recess on the House floor, but no action was taken on the bill.

Hemp supporters, led by Kentucky Agriculture Commissioner James Comer, a Republican, criticized McKee for stalling the bill.

They urged the committee to resist a rewrite and to advance the version that easily passed the GOP-led Senate. They said the bill would put Kentucky at the forefront of the national hemp movement if the federal ban on the crop is ever lifted. The bill also includes safeguards to monitor hemp production that would benefit law enforcement, they said.

Comer said that McKee — his longtime House colleague — had "pulled the rug out from under all of us."

McKee said the hearing Wednesday was the first chance for his committee to delve into the bill.

Asked if the hemp bill was dead, he replied, "No, I don't think so. We'd like to do something this year," he added, referring to his proposed changes to study hemp.

McKee, a northern Kentucky farmer, insisted his changes would be a "much more aggressive" way to promote hemp. His version would enable researchers to seek a federal permit to allow experimental hemp production in hopes of having a crop this year, he said.

Comer said the bill would overwhelmingly pass the House if given the chance.

Under the Senate-passed bill, the state would have GPS coordinates of licensed hemp fields. Hemp growers would undergo criminal background checks, and each grower would be limited to 10 acres per license. A production license would be valid for one year.

Hemp languished as a fringe issue for years but has emerged as a hotly debated topic as Comer championed the crop while traveling the state.

Comer says hemp's reintroduction would give farmers a new crop and would create processing jobs to turn the fiber and seeds into products ranging from paper to biofuels. Dozens of countries already produce the crop.

Kentucky's U.S. senators, Republicans Mitch McConnell and Rand Paul, as well as U.S. Reps. John Yarmuth and Thomas Massie are among those pushing legislation in Congress aimed at allowing farmers to grow hemp.

If the federal measures stall, officials plan to seek a federal waiver allowing hemp production to resume in Kentucky, which once was a leading producer of industrial hemp.

One powerful skeptic is Kentucky House Speaker Greg Stumbo. The Prestonsburg Democrat worries a hemp comeback would complicate marijuana eradication efforts in Kentucky. He's also raised doubts about market demand for the crop.

Other hemp opponents include Kentucky State Police, the state's lead law-enforcement agency. Officials there have said marijuana growers could use hemp fields as cover for pot plants. But hemp supporters say marijuana growers would actually avoid hemp fields because cross-pollination would weaken the potency of pot.

Henderson overcomes slow start for 66-37 triumph over its first-round foe in regional

PRINCETON, Ky. – Despite uncharacteristic horrid shooting in the first and third quarters, Henderson County moved on to the semifinals of the Second Region Tournament with a 66-37 win over Christian County Wednesday night.

Henderson County (24-2) started the game cold from the field, making just 3-of-13 attempts in the first quarter to find itself trailing 12-11. The third quarter was even worse as Henderson hit only 3-of-16 shots in the period.

"We didn't execute very well offensively. They came out in a 2-3 and slowed us down. If we're not making shots, that's a good strategy," Henderson County coach Jeff Haile said. "We weren't making shots early. We took shots a little too quick early in the game."

Fortunately there were two good quarters in the mix. Maci Brown hit four 3-pointers in the second quarter as Henderson went on an 18-0 run. The region favorites posted 27 points in the final period to extend the lead.

Still the game could be a warning to Henderson County, which will meet Madisonville in Monday's semifinals.

"We have to realize these people are coming after us," Haile said.

"We didn't play very good and we definitely need to step it up or we'll lose on Monday night," Brown said.

"I feel like we could have played better. We win by 30 and nothing against Coach Hickey and his kids. They had a good game plan and did the best they could do," Haile said. "I know what we're capable of and we didn't play up to our potential."

Henderson did take command in the second quarter by scoring the first 18 points of the period and led 33-17 at halftime.

"We started making shots and they started missing. We did turn them over a little. We changed our press a little and they threw it away more," Haile said.

Brown, who totaled 16 points, hit four of her five 3-pointers in the quarter to spark Henderson.

"I stopped rushing my shot," she said. "I got my feet set and took my time."

Each team scored just six points in the third quarter.

Henderson extended the lead in the final period as Ellie Fruit, who had a double-double with 23 points and 12 rebounds, scored the first nine points of the fourth quarter.

"It was one of those back-and-forth games. We were cold then hot then cold then hot," Haile said.

Henderson did dominate the boards, outrebounding Christian County 52-24 as the off shooting night created numerous offensive rebounding opportunities. DeAsia Outlaw had nine rebound and Breya Cooper added six in a late contribution off the bench. Oshaguala Davis topped Christian County (8-20) with 11 points and seven rebounds.

Madisonville (16-16) advanced to the semifinals with a 63-35 victory over Livingston Central in Wednesday's opening game.

Webster is facing familiar scenario

Lady Trojans have two wins over Caldwell

By Kevin Patton
kpatton@thegleaner.com
270-831-8350

Tonight's scenario is a bit too familiar for Webster County coach Parker McCalister.

The Lady Trojans (22-5) face host Caldwell County (21-9) at 7:30 p.m. in the opening round of the Girls Second Region Tournament.

Webster County easily won two regular season games with the Lady Tigers, 66-34 on Jan. 17 in the semifinals of the All A Classic regional at Crittenden County and 66-43 on Feb. 12 in Princeton.

After a pair of double-digit victories over Union County in the regular season, the Lady Trojans survived a double overtime scare from the Bravettes in the opening round of last week's Sixth District Tournament.

"Go back to Union County. We played them twice in the regular season and then the third time we go to double overtime. It's hard to beat a team three times," McCalister said. "This is like Union County, the third time was on their home floor in a tournament situation."

"Webster is one of the top two teams in our region," Caldwell County coach Malissa Thomas said. "We're going to have to play really well, but our team is playing well right now. We've already played them twice so we know what we are up against."

The teams also played last year in the first round of the regional tournament with Webster County taking a 62-41 victory.

Caldwell County, which hasn't reached the semifinals since 2009, has won 14 of its last 17 games. Two of those losses came at the hands of Webster County.

The Lady Tigers won the Seventh District title by beating Madisonville 57-50 after splitting two regular-season games with the Lady Maroons.

"We've progressed just how we've needed to. We're playing our best basketball right now," Thomas said. "We're going to try to handle the ball better than we have the last couple of times we played Webster."

Defense will be the key for the Lady Trojans, who have reached the semifinals three of the last four years.

"How we guard people and how we compete on the defensive end is why we are where we're at," McCalister said. "If we don't guard people, we're just a mediocre, average team. When we play defense well, we're pretty good."

Senior guard McKenzie Ames leads a balanced scoring attack for Caldwell County, which has five players who average between 10 and 12 points.

"We have several weapons we can go to. If someone has an off night, we have other people we can count on. We're not a one-man show for sure," said Thomas, who is in her third season at Caldwell County after spending five seasons as Lyon County's coach.

In tonight's opening game, University Heights (22-7) will face Lyon County (11-19) at 6 p.m. The winners of tonight's games will meet in Monday's 7:30 p.m. semifinal.

Harrow leads UK in 85-55 win

By Gary Graves
Associated Press

LEXINGTON – Ryan Harrow's 19 points led Kentucky as every starter reached double figures, and the Wildcats dominated outmanned Mississippi State for an 85-55 victory Wednesday night, the Wildcats' third in a row.

Alex Poythress added 16 points, Willie Cauley-Stein 12 and Julius Mays and Archie Goodwin 11 each as Kentucky (20-8, 11-4 SEC) pulled within a game of first-place Florida with two games remaining. The Wildcats also improved to 3-1 since freshman center Nerlens Noel's season-ending knee injury on Feb. 12.

Kentucky had to be careful not to overlook a Mississippi State team that entered with a 12-game losing streak and just eight healthy players. The Wildcats easily avoided that trap, leading from the outset and steadily pulling away for its most lopsided SEC win this season.

They shot 34 of 62 from the field (55 percent) and outrebounded Mississippi State 42-29. Poythress had eight rebounds, Harrow seven.

Fred Thomas' 13 points led the Bulldogs (7-20, 2-13). Colin Borchert and Jalen Steele each added 10.

Wednesday marked another hard night for the Bulldogs, whose 72-31 loss at home to Vanderbilt on Saturday was actually their second-largest margin of defeat during the losing streak — Missouri hung a 78-36 pasting on them two weeks ago.

JAMES CRISP/ASSOCIATED PRESS

Kentucky's Ryan Harrow (12) shoots next to Mississippi State's Tyson Cunningham and Kentucky's Willie Cauley-Stein, rear, on Wednesday night at Rupp Arena.

Mississippi State's only consolation was topping that point total early in the second half, but by then Kentucky was heading toward a 30-point lead. The Bulldogs made just 18 of 56 from the field (32 percent), including 6 of 24 from 3-point range.

Kentucky's big night included members of its 1996 championship team receiving specially-designed school rings to go along with the NCAA-issued jewelry after they won their sixth title. Sandwiched around that halftime ceremony were two halves in which the Wildcats maintained their momentum from Saturday's overtime victory against Missouri by extending their winning streak.

Kentucky has recently raised the bar on its play, shooting at least 50 percent against both Vanderbilt and Missouri with contributions from all over the roster. That trend continued Wednesday night for the Wildcats.

Cauley-Stein has been the most notable emergence, becoming the post force the Wildcats needed after Noel tore his anterior cruciate ligament against Florida.

The 7-footer is the reigning SEC Freshman of the Week after averaging 13.5 points and 9.5 rebounds with 10 blocks last week, including seven against Missouri. Kentucky's guard play has also improved, with sophomore Harrow re-establishing himself at the point, Goodwin playing more controlled and fifth-year senior Mays assuming the leadership role with 24 points against the Tigers.

That group plus reserves Jon Hood and Jarrod Polson helped stake Kentucky to a 26-10 lead after 12 minutes.

Daytona champ Johnson enjoying whirlwind week

By Schuyler Dixon

Jimmie Johnson poses for photos after winning the Daytona 500 NASCAR Sprint Cup Series race on Sunday, Feb. 24, at Daytona International Speedway in Daytona Beach, Fla.

DALLAS – Jimmie Johnson will have covered all four time zones and five states on his Daytona 500 victory tour by the time he climbs in the car for the first of two races in Phoenix this weekend.

To the victor go the toils, although that's hardly the way the five-time Sprint Cup champion views things.

"I know what time zone I'm in," Johnson said Wednesday during a stop in Dallas to promote the April race in Texas. "I'm a little confused on days. Not much sleep, but some of that is self-induced. But it's been a very fun ride."

If Johnson was feeling a little road weary, maybe a pep rally with primary sponsor Lowe's will help.

There was double cause for celebration Wednesday night in Las Vegas after Johnson's Hendrick Motorsports No. 48 team announced a two-year extension with the only primary sponsor Johnson has ever had. The new contract runs through 2015, and the announcement happened to coincide with a major sales meeting.

"I'll be in front of 5,000 store managers, and they treat me like Elvis," Johnson told The Associated Press. "It's a great relationship."

The Daytona victory celebration started with an impromptu Harlem Shake video, followed by the early Monday morning ritual of turning in the winning car for display at the Daytona track. Then it was on to Connecticut for part of a day, and New York overnight for a full day of media engagements Tuesday.

Johnson and his publicity team landed in the Dallas area Tuesday night, and he was back at it Wednesday before hopping a plane to Vegas. He'll be in Los Angeles on Thursday before finally getting back to the business of racing Friday. He's running the Nationwide race Saturday and will be trying Sunday for a series-best 62nd victory since his rookie year in 2002.

After his first Daytona victory in 2006, Johnson remembers the following week as busy. Just not quite this busy.

"I think that NASCAR has worked very hard to get us in major markets, and people want to see us," Johnson said. "They want to see the winner, want to talk to the winner. I think there's more interest today than what I personally had and what our sport had in 2006."

By the time he gets to Phoenix, Johnson will have a lot of catching up to do. He says Tuesday is normally "download" day, when he goes over the previous week and looks ahead to the next one with crew chief Chad Knaus and the rest of his team. Instead, he was chatting up David Letterman.

"So I feel a little removed and not really in the space to go racing in Phoenix," he said. "But it's for good reason, and Chad's going to cut me some slack and I'll have to catch up Friday when I get to the track."

Knaus doesn't really feel the need to cut his driver any slack.

"Jimmie does a very good job of balancing that out," Knaus said. "He'll be on point when it comes time for Phoenix."

Johnson's first Daytona win sparked the first of five consecutive championship seasons through 2010. He had no way to compare a Daytona win and a series title then. Now that he can compare, he better understands the scope of a win the so-called Super Bowl of NASCAR.

"So to experience this after the five championships, what I'm getting at is this is like winning a championship," Johnson said. "I'm just as busy and there's just as much reach for myself, my sponsors, my team, as it did from winning a championship. It's amazing the impact of this single event."

McIlroy, Woods will start their road to the Masters in the Honda Classic

By Doug Ferguson
Associated Press

PALM BEACH GARDENS, Fla. – This is not the rivalry anyone had in mind when Tiger Woods and Rory McIlroy began the year.

They made their debut in Abu Dhabi last month and both missed the cut. The next time they played in the same tournament was last week in the Match Play Championship, and both were eliminated in the first round.

The difference is that Woods returned to Torrey Pines the week after missing the cut. He left little reason for anyone to doubt his game when he built a lead that reached eight shots until the day dragged on and he won by four for his 75th career win on the PGA Tour.

McIlroy knew starting the year there would attention on his change from Titleist to Nike, and it only intensified with two bad results.

But the start of the Florida swing is no time to panic, and McIlroy sure didn't sound worried at the Honda Classic.

"It's fine," he said. "I knew coming into (the year) it was going to be a bit of a process and I knew there was going to be comments if it didn't happen for me right away," McIlroy said. "I'm only two tournaments into the season. I've still 20 to go. So it's not like I'm in any rush. It's not like I'm pushing for answers. Everything is there. It's just a matter of putting it all together."

McIlroy put it together much sooner a year ago.

He was runner-up in Abu Dhabi, tied for fifth in Dubai, lost in the final of the Match Play Championship and then won the Honda Classic, making one clutch par save after another to hold off a late rally by Woods. McIlroy went to No. 1 by winning at PGA National, and he has been atop the world ranking since winning the PGA Championship.

How much longer he stays there depends on his game — and that of Woods, who is No. 2 and making up ground.

They are the featured players as the Florida swing gets under way Thursday in the Honda Classic, a tournament that has been rejuvenated in recent years with a couple of significant moves. One was the site of the tournament to PGA National, which has hosted a PGA Championship and a Ryder Cup and makes for good television with so much water in play over the closing holes.

The other was a vast improvement in the neighborhood. Woods moved to nearby Jupiter Island, while McIlroy, Lee Westwood and former Masters champion Charl Schwartzel are located at Old Palm just down the road. Keegan Bradley, Rickie Fowler, Dustin Johnson and others also have moved to south Florida.

Dutrow sues over NY ban

ALBANY, N.Y. – Kentucky Derby-winning trainer Rick Dutrow has filed a federal lawsuit trying to overturn his 10-year ban from racing in New York for drug violations.

The lawsuit, filed this week in U.S. District Court in Brooklyn, says the 53-year-old Dutrow has been "irreparably harmed" by the New York State Racing and Wagering Board for what he says is effectively a lifetime ban.

Dutrow claims racing officials engaged in "wrongful and malicious actions" against him. He's seeking $10 million in damages for lost earnings, punitive damages and an order lifting the ban.

Antley, Borel lead finalists

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N.Y. – Jockey Chris Antley, a two-time Kentucky Derby winner whose talents were overshadowed by the drug abuse that killed him, is a finalist for election to the National Museum of Racing's Hall of Fame.

Other finalists are jockeys Calvin Borel, Garrett Gomez, Craig Perret and Alex Solis, and trainer Gary Jones. Thoroughbreds are Ashado, Housebuster, Invasor, and Lure.

Antley captured the Derby in 1991 with Strike the Gold and again in 1999 with Charismatic, who also won the Preakness that year.

Beltran leads Cards in rout

PORT ST. LUCIE, Fla. – Carlos Beltran hit a two-run double in a four-run third inning, Yadier Molina and John Jay added RBI doubles in the fourth and the St. Louis Cardinals routed the New York Mets 12-4 Wednesday.

The starters in the top five slots in the Cardinals' batting order combined to hit 5-for-10 with four doubles and seven RBIs, and St. Louis finished with 14 hits.

Cardinals starter Lance Lynn gave up two runs and four hits in two innings, including John Buck's two-run homer in the second.

Four Alabama players dismissed

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. – Four Alabama players have been dismissed from the team following their arrests after two robberies on campus.

Alabama coach Nick Saban said Wednesday that linebackers D.J. Pettway and Tyler Hayes, safety Eddie Williams and H-back Brent Calloway "are no longer associated with the football program."

Saban says the players' "actions do not reflect the spirit and character we want our organization to reflect."

49ers to send QB Smith to KC

Alex Smith is headed to Kansas City, the first major acquisition by the Chiefs since Andy Reid took over as coach.

A person with knowledge of the trade said Wednesday that the Chiefs have agreed to deal for the 2005 top overall draft pick who lost his starting quarterback job in San Francisco to Colin Kaepernick last season.

The person spoke on condition of anonymity because the trade does not become official until March 12, when the NFL's new business year begins.

Davis skips Hornets trip

NEW ORLEANS – The New Orleans Hornets say rookie forward Anthony Davis has a left shoulder sprain and will not play on Thursday night in Oklahoma City.

Davis hurt his shoulder in a collision with Brooklyn's Brook Lopez under the basket late in the third quarter of New Orleans' 101-97 loss to the Nets.

Louisville forward Chane Behanan (21) drives to the basket past DePaul's Worrel Clahar, left, and Jamee Crockett, right, during their game in Rosemont, Ill., on Wednesday night.

Russ Smith scored 17 points, Peyton Siva had 16 and No. 10 Louisville beat DePaul 79-58 on Wednesday night for its fourth consecutive victory.

Chane Behanan added 10 points and nine rebounds for the Cardinals (23-5, 11-4 Big East), who held the Blue Demons to 36 percent shooting and forced 19 turnovers. Smith also had five assists and four steals.

Louisville is unbeaten since it lost 104-101 in five overtimes at Notre Dame on Feb. 9 in the longest regular-season game in Big East history. With the victory over sliding DePaul, the Cardinals moved into a tie with Marquette for second place in the conference behind Georgetown.

Rick Pitino's team visits No. 12 Syracuse, and Notre Dame takes on Marquette in a big slate of games for the Big East on Saturday.

Brandon Young scored 22 points and Cleveland Melvin had 20 for the Blue Demons (11-17, 2-13), who have dropped three in a row and 12 of 13 overall.

■ Penn St. 84, Michigan 78: Jermaine Marshall scored 25 points and Penn State upset No. 4 Michigan 84-78 on Wednesday night for its first Big Ten win of the season.

The Nittany Lions (9-18, 1-14) had lost 18 straight regular-season conference games dating to last season, but they roared back from a 15-point deficit with 10:39 left behind the energetic play of Marshall. The junior guard scored 19 in the second half, including four 3s that whipped Jordan Center fans into a frenzy.

D.J. Newbill added 17 points for Penn State, which hit a season-high 10 3-pointers. Marshall's twisting drive to the basket gave the Nittany Lions a three-point lead before Michigan's Glenn Robinson III misfired on a 3 with 17 seconds left.

■ Evansville 59, Wichita St. 56: Colt Ryan scored 29 points, and Evansville knocked off Missouri Valley Conference leader Wichita State 59-56 on Wednesday night.

The loss, combined with Creighton's win at Bradley, dropped Wichita State into a tie with Creighton atop the conference. The teams play at Creighton on Saturday in the regular-season finale, with the winner taking the No. 1 conference tournament seed.

Ryan was 10 of 18 from the floor, including three 3-pointers, for the Purple Aces (17-13, 9-8), who didn't have anyone else in double figures.

■ Miami 76, Virginia Tech 58: No. 5 Miami went 11 minutes without a basket Wednesday night, then finally shook off a 10-day scoring slump and pulled away from Virginia Tech, 76-58.

■ Georgetown 79, Connecticut 78: Otto Porter Jr.'s layup with 9.5 seconds remaining in the second overtime gave No. 7 Georgetown a 79-78 victory over Connecticut on Wednesday night, the Hoyas' 10th straight win and first-ever at Gampel Pavilion.

■ Oklahoma St. 64, TCU 47: Le'Bryan Nash scored a career-high 28 points, Marcus Smart had his typically strong all-around game not far from the high school where he won two state championships, and No. 15 Oklahoma State beat offensively challenged TCU 64-47 on Wednesday night.

■ St. Louis 70, St. Joseph's 53: Dwayne Evans had 21 points, 12 rebounds and three blocks in perhaps his most complete effort of the season, helping No. 18 Saint Louis run its winning streak to 10 games with a 70-53 victory over Saint Joseph's on Wednesday night.

■ Pittsburgh 64, South Florida 44: Tray Woodall scored 14 points and No. 23 Pittsburgh pulled away in the second half, beating South Florida 64-44 on Wednesday night to hand the struggling Bulls their 10th consecutive loss.

■ LSU 65, Arkansas 60: Charles Carmouche scored a season-high 26 points, and LSU held on for a 65-60 victory over Arkansas after nearly squandering a 22-point lead Wednesday night.

■ Iowa 58, Purdue 48: Aaron White had 18 points and nine rebounds and Iowa beat Purdue 58-48 on Wednesday night for its fourth win in five games.

WOMEN

■ Louisville 72, Seton Hall 62: Antonita Slaughter scored 17 points to lead No. 16 Louisville to a 72-62 victory over Seton Hall in a Big East game on Wednesday night.

Top-ranked teams keep falling in crazy season

By Jon Krawczynski
Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS – The top spot in The Associated Press Top 25 is the last place any team wants to be this season.

When Indiana lost at Minnesota on Tuesday night, it was the seventh time this season that a No. 1 team has been defeated. That's the highest number since 2009-10, according to STATS. And this season isn't over yet.

Second-ranked Gonzaga is poised to rise to No. 1 in the next poll if the Bulldogs can get through the rest of the week unscathed. If that happens, Gonzaga would be the fifth team atop the poll this season. That would be the most since 2008-09.

"There's been almost a game of hot potato for the No. 1 ranking this season," Big Ten Network college basketball analyst Tom Dienhart said. "Nobody seems to want it. It's been a crazy year."

Some of the biggest names in the land have had their hands on that coveted ranking. The Hoosiers haven't been able to handle it. They've lost three times this season while ranked No. 1. Duke has gone down twice and Michigan and Louisville have also ascended to the top spot only to be knocked off.

No matter who gets up there next, the jostling at the top all season will ensure that the air of invincibility that often comes with the top ranking won't be there for the rest of the season.

"Every year is wide open, but more so this year than ever," said Minnesota coach Tubby Smith, whose Golden Gophers were swarmed by their delirious fans on Tuesday night after their first win over a No. 1 team since 1989. "I don't think there's a dominant team you can look at like Kentucky last year. You kind of had an idea they were the best team going, and that's hard to overcome that type of talent."

Five of those Wildcats from last year's national championship team were drafted in June, including the top two picks in the draft. Coach John Calipari hasn't been able to replace his stars quite as quickly as he has been able to in the past, and Kentucky has tumbled out of the rankings. Traditional powers North Carolina and UCLA are also unranked, which has created room for Miami, New Mexico and Saint Louis to creep into the Top 25.

Perhaps no team better illustrates this wild season than Smith's Gophers. They won 15 of their first 16 games to climb to No. 8 in the poll, then lost seven of the next 10 games in the powerful Big Ten to fall off the board.

It took a game against the Hoosiers to wake them up, and Trevor Mbakwe's 21 points and 12 rebounds helped get one of the oldest arenas in the country shaking as another No. 1 team bit the dust.

Race distance: 200 miles, 200 laps.
Last year: Elliott Sadler raced to the first of his four 2012 victories.
Last week: Tony Stewart won the opener at Daytona, a race marred by a last-lap accident that injured more than 30 fans. Kyle Larson hit the cars in front of him and went airborne into the fence, hurling a tire and large pieces of debris into the stands.
Fast facts: Daytona 500 champion Jimmie Johnson is making his first Nationwide start since finishing second at Watkins Glen in 2011. He will drive JR Motorsports No. 5 Chevrolet. Fellow Sprint Cup drivers Brad Keselowski, Kyle Busch, Kevin Harvick and Matt Kenseth also are entered. Busch has a series-record 51 victories. ... Joey Logano won in November at the track.
Next race: Sam's Town 300, March 9, Las Vegas Motor Speedway, Las Vegas.

CAMPING WORLD TRUCK

Next race: Kroger 250, April 6, Martinsville Speedway, Martinsville, Va.
Last week: Johnny Sauter won the opener at Daytona, taking advantage of a last-lap crash that brought out a caution and prevented Kyle Busch from making a move on the leader.

Stock market surges again

■ Dow erases Monday's drop

By Steve Rothwell
Associated Press

NEW YORK — The Dow came within 100 points of its all-time high Wednesday after rising sharply for a second straight day.

The market surged following more evidence that the Fed will keep interest rates low, housing will keep recovering and shoppers aren't pulling back on spending, even with a payroll tax hike.

The gains were broad: Twenty-nine of 30 stocks in the Dow Jones industrial average rose.

All 10 industries in the Standard & Poor's 500 index climbed.

The Dow Jones industrial average rose 175.24 points, or 1.2 percent, to 14,075.37. The index is now less than 100 points away from its record close of 14,164 reached in October 2007.

The Dow has surged 290 points in the past two days, erasing its drop of 216 points Monday when inconclusive results from an election in Italy renewed worries that Europe's fiscal crisis could flare up again.

"The market psychology has clearly shifted. It's no longer sell the rally, it's buy the dips," said Dan Veru, chief investment officer of Palisade Capital Management.

"The economic data continues to be strong."

Stocks have surged since the start of the year. The Dow is up 7.4 percent.

Earnings for S&P 500 companies will climb 7.8 percent in the fourth quarter, the third straight quarter of growth, according to data from S&P Capital IQ.

The Standard & Poor's 500 index gained 19.05 points, or 1.3 percent, to 1,515.99. The Nasdaq composite rose 32.61 points, or 1.3 percent, to 3,162.26. The index is 6.5 percent higher for the year, and is about 3.1 percent short of its record close of 1,565.

Investors were also encouraged Wednesday that Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke stood behind the central bank's low-interest-rate policies as he faced lawmakers for a second day. His comments dissipated worries about the bank's resolve to keep up the program. Those worries sprung up last week when minutes from the bank's last policy meeting revealed disagreement among Fed officials.

Also, the number of Americans who signed contracts to buy homes rose in January from December to the highest level in almost three years. The report continued a string of positive housing news. Sales of new homes jumped 16 percent last month to the highest level since July 2008.

CHICAGO BOARD OF TRADE

CHICAGO — Grains futures mostly rose Wednesday on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Wheat for May delivery rose 6.50 cents to $7.1750 a bushel; May corn rose 1.25 cent to $6.96 a bushel; May oats were flat at $3.7175 a bushel; while May soybeans added 2.25 cents to $14.34 a bushel.

Beef futures rose, while pork prices fell on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

April live cattle rose 0.40 cent to $1.2970 a pound; March feeder cattle rose 0.40 cent to $1.4157 a pound; April lean hogs slipped 0.32 cent to 81.25 cents a pound.

COMMODITIES

Metal prices were lower Wednesday after investors decided that Italy's gridlock-inducing election might not be so worrisome after all.

Gold for April delivery fell $19.80, or 1.2 percent, to $1,595.70 per ounce. Silver and platinum were down 1 percent or more.

On Monday Italy's elections failed to produce a clear majority and made investors worry that the country could renege on some of its commitments to cut spending, which some investors believe is essential for getting the country on sound financial terms. Nervous investors may turn to gold as a safe haven. But on Wednesday, Italy auctioned off government bonds smoothly, a sign that investors are coming to grips with the uncertainty.

May silver fell 33.5 cents to $28.985 per ounce. April platinum was down $16.40 to $1,600.10 per ounce. May copper edged down 1.6 cents to $3.567 per pound. June palladium rose $3.75 to $745.65 per ounce

Oil prices were lackluster. Benchmark oil rose 13 cents to $92.76 a barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange. The government reported that crude inventories increased less than expected. The nation's oil supplies are nearly 10 percent above year-ago levels.

Brent crude, used to price many kinds of oil imported by U.S. refineries, fell 84 cents to $111.87 in London.

Wholesale gasoline was down 9 cents to $3.11 a gallon. Heating oil fell 4 cents to $2.99 a gallon. Natural gas fell 2 cents to $3.43 per 1,000 cubic feet

Most agricultural commodities were flat. Wheat inched up 1 cent to $7.12 per bushel. Corn moved up half a cent to $6.9525 per bushel. Soybeans rose 7.75 cents to $14.395 per bushel.

Don't be Fooled by the Numbers!

By Mike Farmer, RPh., Jed Dunaway, RPh., and Ginny Sue Floyd, RPh.

"Imagine a new blood pressure medication is tested against an older medication for one year. Everyone in the study has high blood pressure: 100 people take the new medication, 2 have heart attacks; another 100 people take the older medication, 3 have heart attacks. So for people with high blood pressure taking the new medication, we expect one less heart attack per year for every 100 people using it. This is absolute risk. Looking at the same information as relative risk, the new medication reduces heart attack risk by 33 percent or one third. If 12 out of 100 of the new medication users have heart attacks and 18 out of 100 people taking the older medication do also, then the new medication still reduces the relative risk of heart attack by one third or 33 percent." Relative risk percentages often sounds more impressive, and are often used in marketing by drug companies. (from an article by Dr. Alisa Hideg, published in The Spokesman-Review)

Advice

Mom shouldn't push son to accept her new man

COLUMNIST

Dear Amy: I was suddenly widowed five years ago. I waited about two years and then started to date.

I have recently fallen in love with a great guy, and we are very happy. The problem is that my 18-year-old son is having a hard time accepting this situation.

I have always been careful to not have the guy stay over or even spend a lot of time at our house.

I know it is difficult for my son to accept the fact that I am dating and happy again.

How do I get him used to the idea and help him accept the fact that this guy is really nice and makes me very happy?

— Cautious Mom

Dear Mom: This is tricky. Your son is at a transitional age. He sees his own adulthood looming. This prospect doesn't always fill a person with excitement.

It can be a time of extreme anxiety about the future and wistfulness for the end of childhood.

Layer on top of that the loss he suffered in adolescence, which is significant and life altering. I can't imagine anything tougher for a boy.

And then there is this: We parents need to realize that our own personal happiness is not always paramount to our children. This is one of the toughest personal lessons of parenthood.

Our children love and care about us — but when we are in love or get a promotion or win at the track, their joy is often tempered through the familiar (and completely natural) filter of childhood, where they think, "Well, what about me?"

You need to deal with this by realizing that your son will probably always care more about his personal life than yours.

Continue to be thoughtful and careful. Don't push this man at your son and don't insist that your son be happy because you're happy — or even be happy for you.

Talk to the young man about his own life. Draw him out about his own dreams. Fold your new guy slowly and naturally into your life and assure your son at every step of the way that he is not losing you and that he will be fine.

Talk to him about his dad and — most importantly — listen to him with an open, patient and loving attitude.

It's worth effort to get extension on return policy

COLUMNIST

Dear Readers: How often do you purchase items online or by phone through a catalog order?

I ordered a piece of luggage that looked perfect for my kind of business travel. I wouldn't be traveling and able to try it out for a month or so.

After reading the receipt, I noticed that there was only a 30-day time frame for returns!

I called the company (writing down the time, day and who I spoke with). I explained I had a trip coming up and was definitely going to be past the 30-day return policy if for some reason I needed to return the luggage. I was given an extension.

So, call the company and try requesting a return extension. At the very least, it is worth a try.

— Heloise

Dear Heloise: I have a great hint for using the cardboard paper-towel tubes. I pack one full of plastic grocery bags and newspaper bags that I am keeping for other uses.

A tube fits perfectly in a kitchen drawer, ready to grab and get a bag out of. You would be surprised just how many bags will fit in one tube!

God would never contradict Bible

COLUMNIST

Dear Rev. Graham: Does God ever tell us to do something, or to believe something, that contradicts the Bible?

A friend of mine says the Bible is out of date and we need to let the Spirit guide us in new directions, but I'm not so sure about that.

— S.Y.

Dear S.Y.: You're right to be skeptical of your friend's views — because God never tells us to do anything that He has clearly forbidden in His Word, the Bible. God does not change, and neither does His Word.

After all, one reason God has given us His Word is so we can know what is true and right — and also what isn't true and right.

If it was wrong to reject Christ and nail Him to a cross 2,000 years ago — then it's still wrong.

If it was wrong to murder or steal or commit adultery when God gave the Ten Commandments to His people over 3,000 years ago — then it's still wrong.

As the Psalmist wrote, "The law of the Lord is perfect.... The statutes of the Lord are trustworthy" (Psalm 19:7).

Pray for your friend, that he will realize the moral and spiritual dangers he faces by rejecting God's Word and giving in to the world's relativism.

Perhaps he's struggling with a particular sin in his life, and is seeking to excuse it by claiming God doesn't care.

Or he may be anxious to win the approval of others and not appear "narrow-minded."

Whatever his reason, ask God to help you be a witness for Christ to your friend — not condemning him, but being an example to him of Christ's love and truth.

The Bible says, "Let your conversation be always full of grace, seasoned with salt, so that you may know how to answer everyone" (Colossians 4:6).

Hot tub temperature should be personal preference

DR. KEITH ROACH
COLUMNIST

Dear Dr. Roach: I occasionally attend an aquatics class, and after we're finished, everyone wants to sit in a hot tub except me.

One time the instructor finished the class in the hot tub. I was not happy. They are so hot it takes me 10 to 15 minutes to get into them, and sometimes too hot to get in, period.

I'd like to know what's so great about them. Also, are saunas really good for a person's health?

— H.W.

Dear H.W.: Hot tubs tend to relax muscles and that, combined with the buoyancy taking weight off of joints, can help some people with arthritis.

Hot temperatures, especially before bedtime, also can help people sleep better, so saunas and hot tubs can help with insomnia.

However, every person has a different tolerance to temperature, and you shouldn't use hot tubs or saunas if you're not comfortable. Talk to the aquatics instructor.

Dear Dr. Roach: Having been advised by oncologists to avoid all soy products in our diet (and taking an aromatase inhibitor to reduce the amount of estrogen produced by our bodies), several other estrogen receptor positive breast cancer patients and I have the following questions:

How do phytoestrogens compare with estrogens produced by the body?

Is soy the only food to avoid, or do other foods such as beans, nuts or coffee present a danger?

Are all forms of soy equally detrimental? They seem to be everywhere (soy lecithin, soybean oil, soy protein, soy sauce, etc.).

— C.S.

Dear C.S.: Soy protein contains isoflavones, which act as weak estrogens in the body. Some studies have shown no adverse effects on breast cancer patients taking in large amounts of soy protein; however, you should continue to follow the advice of your oncologists.

It's possible that by taking in enough soy protein, you can get an elevated estrogen blood level. High blood estrogen levels are of concern in women with estrogen receptor positive (ER+) breast cancers, since the estrogen causes the cancers to grow.

Soy phytoestrogens are unique to soy: nuts and coffee do not have them. Similarly, since it's the soy protein that is at issue, soy lecithin, a fat emulsifier, is not a problem.

Soybean oil and soy sauce contain no protein and are also not a concern.

Questions about breast cancer and its treatment are found in the booklet on that subject. To obtain a copy, write: Dr. Roach — No. 1101, Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475. Horoscope

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (Feb. 28). The giving extends throughout the year as you continually deliver, even when you have not been asked, what you know will be needed, wanted and perhaps appreciated. It is your deepest joy to give in this way. Unusual bonds are forged in March and June. Someone makes good on a debt to you in August. Cancer and Sagittarius people adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 30, 22, 48, 7 and 19.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). When someone you were thinking about calls you, it's an affirmation of your psychic powers. Put them to even better use by envisioning an improved version of your personal life.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). Instead of talking to a few people in depth, connect briefly with many. There is something valuable to be gained from skimming the surface and covering a lot of social ground.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). Your retrograde guiding planet may lead you back to the scene of a mistake, giving you the rare do-over opportunity. You don't have to do it right; just do it different from the way you did it the last time.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). You're not trying to win someone over. Rather, you just want to express yourself completely. Anyway, small gestures will soon be forgotten. You'll have to be bold to make a difference.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). Ideally, you'd have someone else around to sing your praises, but this is not always possible. Better to do some confident self-promotion than to modestly let an opportunity slip by.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). When you really like someone, you will think of ways to be of help. You'll present a few this afternoon. Your aim is not to be paid, but to build the relationship and your value.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). It does you no good to have projects on the back burner if you don't remember to turn on the heat. Once you do, you'll be surprised at how many will be happily fed from that low-key little dish.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). Unlike the inexperienced people you may find yourself among today, you don't mind getting a negative answer. That's where your natural salesmanship and the responses you've taken care to prepare kick in.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). You're the bright one with all the crazy notions today, which is a very good person to be. Money can't buy ideas. Ideas come first, and the money can't help but follow.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). The world reads you like a poem today; your emotions seem compressed into brief bursts of language. Everyone knows how you feel and responds.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). You've heard many warnings in your lifetime and know better than to give all equal credence. There are those around you who have cried "wolf" too many times to be taken seriously.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). Beauty relies on freshness. It's never the same twice. That's why beauty must be searched for and can't be hoarded, though it's fun to try.

Many seniors already putting their skills to work in co-op jobs

PHOTOS FURNISHED

Shawn Bringman, a senior in welding, works on a project at his co-op job at Pittsburg Tank and Tower.

Brendi Owen, a senior in marketing, puts her social networking skills to work at IWT, where she is employed to maintain the company's presence on Facebook and Twitter.

Fourth in a series

Brendi Owen, senior in marketing

Grateful to have had the opportunity to get a jump on my future marketing career through work-based learning, I am a soon-to-be graduate of HCHS with a marketing career major certificate to my credit.

Currently I work with the professionals at IWT, recently named the Henderson Chamber of Commerce's 2012 Small Business of the Year. I actually get to do "real-life" marketing for this world-class organization.

I help IWT connect with and build relationships with our target market by maintaining IWT's social networking efforts, such as Facebook and Twitter. You can find out more about IWT at iwtsolutions.com and follow us on Twitter @IWTsolutions.

Dakota Cruse, a senior in welding

As a 18-year-old senior at Henderson County High School, I am currently in my fourth year of welding classes. I think these tech classes have prepared me for a welding career.

Since I have worked at my welding co-op job, I have learned how important it is to do your best. Not only does this benefit me but it is important because I am also representing Henderson County High School.

Working at Allstate Tower has improved my welding technique and strengthened my knowledge of mig welding and safety. We have daily safety meetings before work to go over events from the previous day and to call attention to safety tips and reminders.

I have also learned how to read blueprints, custom fabricate parts and control the size of my weld bead to meet the size of the weld that is on the blue prints. The HCHS Career and Technical Unit co-op program has made this work experience possible.

Mason Quinn, a senior in visual communications

Mason Quinn

Our school offers many technical classes in which you can find what kind of job you are interested in and further your knowledge of it. The career path I chose is visual communications.

I have been in vis communication all four years of my high school experience, and this class has really helped me learn more about graphic design and how it is all around us.

My teacher, Mr. Givens, put me in our school's co-op program and ever since I've been learning real world experiences. I plan to find a summer job that deals with visual communications to stay college-ready.

Dalton Nation, a senior in banking and finance

Dalton Nation

Over the course of this year, I have developed a strong interest in the fields of banking and finance. I hope that one day I can help people to properly manage their money and make strong financial decisions.

At the Colonels' Corner Bank and in my accounting class my sophomore year, I have learned the essentials in the world of money. I've been educated on the inner workings of a bank and how to run a bank efficiently and successfully.

When I graduate and go to college, I believe that these skills will set me apart from the rest.

Abby Holeman, a senior in health science

Currently, the career that interests me the most is nursing. My CTE classes have helped prepare me for this field very well. I have taken a series of classes for the nursing field.

First, I took Health Science 1. The next class I took was called MNA, which stands for medical nurse aide. In this class, you learn the basic hands-on skills that are needed to be a nurse aide. At the end of this course you are tested to see how well you know the skills. I am already a certified nurse aide due to this program.

I am currently in Health Science 3 at Orthopedic Associates for my clinical rotation. I currently follow the physical therapist and watch patients regain strength to walk again. I have also followed Dr. Emerson (orthopedic doctor), too. Following him is interesting; I got to see several different fractures and how steroid shots are given to help arthritis.

I am thankful for the health science department. It has given me the chance to experience what it's like to work in the medical field and an idea of areas of nursing that I am not interested in.

Quinton Stovall, a senior in agriculture

During my high school career at HCHS, I have taken many classes in the ag program, such as Principals of Ag, Agri-Biology and Farm Management, just to name a few.

This year, as a senior, I have been given the opportunity to co-op at Benton's Garden Center. During this time I have learned many things, from how to differentiate type of plants and trees, to how to lay mulch and landscape a house or places of business.

I have also learned the importance of doing quality work to help our community look excellent for hometown patrons as well as visitors. But most importantly, I have learned how to work with the public, which is a skill everyone needs to have.

Kaylee Carmon, a senior in pre-nursing

The career that interests me is nursing. My CTE health science classes have helped to prepare me for college. Several of the courses have been dual-credited with Henderson Community College.

The classes have helped me to become a state registered nurse aide and certified in CPR and first aid. I'm currently a paid employee with Redbanks as a SRNA during the school day. The CTE Unit has shown me how important being career-ready really is to my future!

Shawn Bringman, a senior in welding

As a senior, I am currently in my fourth year of welding classes. I believe these tech classes have prepared me for a welding career. This year, I'm in Welding 3 and co-op.

My co-op experience has taught me more than just about welding. It has taught me time management, how to work alone and about maturing.

I have learned in the work force, you won't always have your boss overseeing everything and yet you still have to accomplish the task you were assigned. You have to be mature enough to continue to work and complete tasks without supervision.

I have also learned how to balance priorities. Working a job and doing school assignments to the best of my ability is definitely difficult, but my co-op experience has taught me to balance schedules and to prioritize daily tasks.

Lastly, the co-op program has introduced me to many people who have vast knowledge in the welding field. Meeting people in this field has helped me to gain different skills, tips and tricks that help me do to better myself, as well as the chance to stabilize myself in this career field.

It has taught me how to learn from knowledgeable people to continue to grow in the welding field.

Austin Koonce, Chad Pryor and Brandon Cavins, seniors in carpentry

Being in the carpentry program has helped us prepare for our future. Some of the traits that we have obtained while being in the carpentry program are leadership, team work and independent work skills.

This class has helped us become more dependable workers because some tasks require only one person to perform the task at hand. The carpentry program also allows us to co-op. Co-op is a program where students have the opportunity to go work with a company in the same field of work that you are learning.

The co-op program is really helpful for students because they get the experience of working in the real world.

Working in the program has taught us how to be more dependable and independent while working for others. Our experiences in the carpentry program taught us a lot of the carpentry skills that we can use in the future.

Niagara Elementary School students of the month

Special to The Gleaner

Niagara Elementary School has honored its January and February students of the month.

The school's students of the month are selected for being good role models and doing deeds above and beyond what the normal student is doing. Good behavior, manners, recycling, picking up litter, taking good notes in class, problem solving and going the extra mile on an assignment are all ways that these students were recognized.

Students honored as January students of the month were:

Fifth grade: Rhealyn Eblen, daughter of Joni and Timothy Wright; Braxton McGrew, son of Carrie and Steven Loveless and the late Josh McGrew; and Max Wilhite, son of Carrie and Ray Wilhite.

Fourth grade: Mason Bumgardner, son of Jessica and Robert Bumgardner, and Devin Skaggs, son of Rebecca and William Skaggs.

Third grade: Kylie Bennett, daughter of Shannon and Brian Bennett; Lily Duncan, daughter of Holly and Timothy Duncan; and Isabelle Thurmond, daughter of Angela and Joe Thurmond.

Second grade: Dallas Donahoo, grandson of Alice and Dorris Gary; Seth Galloway, son of Dana and James Galloway; and Dakota Varble, son of Ashley Varble.

Today in history

The Associated Press

Today is Thursday, Feb. 28, the 59th day of 2013. There are 306 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Feb. 28, 1993, a gun battle erupted at a religious compound near Waco, Texas, when Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms agents tried to arrest Branch Davidian leader David Koresh on weapons charges; four agents and six Davidians were killed as a 51-day standoff began. (The siege ended April 19 as fire erupted while federal agents smashed their way into the compound; Koresh and 78 other people were killed.)

On this date:

In 1911, President William Howard Taft nominated William H. Lewis to be the first black Assistant Attorney General of the U. S.

In 1942, the heavy cruiser USS Houston and the Australian light cruiser HMAS Perth were attacked by Japanese forces during the World War II Battle of Sunda Strait; both were sunk shortly after midnight.

In 1983, the long-running TV series "M-A-S-H" ended after 11 seasons on CBS with a special 2½-hour finale that was watched by an estimated 121.6 million people.

Ten years ago: NASA released video taken aboard Columbia that had miraculously survived the fiery destruction of the space shuttle with the loss of all seven astronauts; in the footage, four of the crew members can be seen doing routine chores and admiring the view outside the cockpit.

Five years ago: President George W. Bush told a White House news conference the country was not recession-bound; Democratic candidate Barack Obama said the economy was "on the brink of a recession" and blamed economic policies espoused by Bush and Republican presidential contender John McCain.

One year ago: Republican Mitt Romney won presidential primary victories in Arizona and Michigan. Sen. Olympia Snowe, R-Maine, announced she would not seek re-election, citing what she called the increasingly polarized climate of Washington.

7 p.m. on 25
Zero Hour

As Laila (Jacinda Barrett) is forced to repair the next clock for her captor, White Vincent (Michael Nyqvist), she begins leaving a trail of clues for Hank (Anthony Edwards), who's just returned from India. A famous historical figure may hold the clue to unlocking the next clock in the new episode "Pendulum."

7 p.m. on 14
Community

Malcolm McDowell guest stars in this new episode as Noel Cornwallis, a professor whose European history class the study group members are taking. The arrogant German students who faced off against Jeff and Shirley (Joel McHale, Yvette Nicole Brown) are back, and so is Chang (Ken Yeong) — to Dean Pelton's (Jim Rash) chagrin — in "Alternative History of the German Invasion."

8 p.m. on L
Project Runway

Just because you have gray hair and grandchildren doesn't mean you can't look fabulous. In this new episode, the designers are challenged to create some fashionable looks that are also age-appropriate for senior citizens. Joan Rivers, that elder stateswoman of the red carpet, and her daughter, Melissa, are guest judges for "Senior Fling."

Yvette Nicole Brown

Anger Management

Charlie's (Charlie Sheen) latest love interest is a teacher, but not just any teacher. She happens to have his daughter, Sam (Daniela Bobadilla), as one of her students. Nah, we don't see any potential for awkwardness here. Selma Blair also stars in the new episode "Charlie Dates a Teacher."

8 p.m. on CA
King of the Hill

Always in search of the elusive "perfect lawn," Hank and his friends participate in a focus group for a new lawn mower, but minister Boyce Hubert and car salesman Lane Pratley (guest voices Billy Bob Thornton and Dwight Yoakam) throw a wrench into the proceedings in "Nine Pretty Darn Angry Men."

8:30 p.m. on TL
Everybody Loves Raymond

Ray (Ray Romano) forges a strong bond with Amy's (Monica Horan) mother (guest star Georgia Engel) as they work on a puzzle during an Easter get-together in "The Nice Talk." The unexpected friendship causes Debra, Marie, Robert and Peter (Patricia Heaton, Doris Roberts, Brad Garrett, guest star Chris Elliott) to have strong opinions — and seething jealousy.

8:30 p.m. on R
Movie: Grumpy Old Men

Jack Lemmon and Walter Matthau, the original movie odd couple, star in this 1993 comedy as ... well, the title says it all. The two play feuding neighbors whose enmity escalates when a beautiful widow (Ann-Margret) moves into the neighborhood and becomes the object of their competing affections. As the rivalry grows, so does their zest for life, baffling friends and relatives. Daryl Hannah, Kevin Pollak and Burgess Meredith also star.

9 p.m. on f
Archer

Chef and television personality Anthony Bourdain ("The Layover") lends his voice to this new episode as celebrity chef Lance Casteau. His restaurant is the site of Archer, Lana and Cyril's latest undercover assignment — and it's not pretty. H. Jon Benjamin, Aisha Tyler and Chris Parnell are also in the voice cast of "Live and Let Dine."

9 p.m. on CO
The Ben Show

Comedian Ben Hoffman stars in this new series featuring a hybrid of sketch comedy and man-on-the-street vignettes. In each episode, Hoffman works toward a personal goal — such as forming a band or buying a gun — then seeks advice from people he knows and complete strangers on how to achieve it.

Movie: Titanic

Yes, we know. The love story is cheesy, you already know the ending, and that Celine Dion song — let's not go there. Nevertheless, this 1997 blockbuster is still one heck of a movie. Whether you're a sucker for a star-crossed love story, you like cheering for the underdog in a battle of the social classes, or you just like watching the boat wreck, stop apologizing. Everyone needs a guilty pleasure.

Nathan For You

Nathan Fielder ("Jon Benjamin Has a Van") is going to turn the economy around, one small business at a time. Armed with a business degree and life experience, he looks for outrageously innovative ways to help struggling small businesses turn a profit. Whether it's introducing a controversial new flavor at a yogurt shop or finding a legal way for a gas station to charge $1.75 per gallon and stay in the black, his methods often yield unexpected results.

Enlightened

After a meeting with Szidon (James Rebhorn) that Eileen (Molly Shannon) arranges at Tyler's (Mike White) request, Amy (Laura Dern) realizes that he's more compassionate than she expected. A meeting with Levi (Luke Wilson) has its own kind of tension. Dougie (Timm Sharp) loses it when he gets the news about Cogentiva's future. Amy confides in Krista (Sarah Burns) about the Abaddonn expose in the new episode "No Doubt."
